to. Whether a man calls himself a Conservative or a Liberal in England his politics is a matter of no consequence. He is gauged by his knowledge of them. If he is elected simply on political grounds he may possibly delay a reform that is urgently required. What is wanted in England is a practical statesman who understands the position, and the circumstances of the town or the shire that he represents. He is selected to do a certain work, and that is the one thing which he has to bear in mind. In such matters the Government has no support. The Government or opposition is of little avail. There are special duties that fall upon each man, and that he is expected to fulfil. It is

is true that the public do not take the interest in municipal that they show in working at Messrs. Moxham Brothers' quarry, Parramatta, yesterday morning. He had com-

political elections. There may be many reasons for their apathy. Without trying to enumerate them, we may say at once that there would be no improvement to smother local government with party considerations. There have been few instances of this in Australia, and the latest example is sufficient to confirm the sentiment of the political partnership. If local institutions are to be properly worked, it is desirable on the whole that the managers of them should be selected from the men who are most fitted for the business, and not from the men who trade upon some passing cry. The elections may be quieter, but after all they may also be more satisfactory.

The account which we publish from our special reporter at Newcastle strikingly brings out the heroic character of the rescue work done in Stockton last. Here we see the party of miners who were known as the air, but who without hesitation bury themselves in those dark and fatal passages where lie the dead or the dying miners they seek. The story is full of unconscious heroism.

 The men and women in the what they were doing is remarkable in exposing their own lives in order to rescue others, or at least recover their bodies. They underwent experiences that would be feared by novices, but they struggled forth into air and being safely recovered they have back like the two men Ellis and Jux. All the little touches of the account are significant. There is the remark about the taste of that noisome it; it was like the taste of kerosene. In helping out M'DONALD, the first man found, the party struck great oil, the best of the party, who were the men ran to the shore," he felt the pressure in the legs. The faster he tried to run the more the terrible sensation increased. It seemed as if there was a weight dragging him downward." They saw how straggled the coast to the west and north, and brave fellow, DWYER, in three-quarters of an hour led another party into the fatal region. These heroes, after several times penetrating the devastated area, had themselves to be rescued by the National Guard.

The history of mining disasters, unhappily so numerous, is there is nothing more noble than this spirit of self-sacrifice on the part of the miners, who never fail under whatever circumstances of fire, explosion, flood, by that kind of amiable and benevolent opinion which always prevails among people who have

AUCKLAND, Monday.
Tenders for the Government £500,000 3 per cent. 10-20 year debenture have been opened at 10 o'clock to-day. This result is regarded as a success, as none of the issue had been so lodged to the Government lending department, so that the money will come from the public at home & abroad investors.

The stump penetrated the underpart of the arm above the elbow, and penetrated to the bone. His arm was treated by the Jerusalem Dispensary Hospital.

THE INQUEST ON THE VICTIMS TO BE TAKEN TOGETHER.

Yesterday there was only one step of importance taken at Perth in regard to the murder of Captain Butler. The inquest on the body of the victim was held, and was adjourned. About 5 o'clock in the morning the autopsy was made by Dr. Paton and Taylor, and as soon as they had finished their work the coroner (Mr. Leithbridge) accompanied the same jury as had been empanelled in the Preston case. The body was viewed, and was identified in the presence of the jury by two men, Charles Byrnes, a hawker, identified it as the body of the man he had seen at a camp at Waco's Lagoons on the 20th October and 30th October, and was identified in the presence of the jury by two men, Charles Byrnes, a hawker, identified it as the body of the man he had seen at a camp at Waco's Lagoons on the 20th October and 30th October.
